Lost to British tourists since the 'thirties, through war and communism, the Ostsee coast and hinterland of Mecklenburg-Vorpommern in northern Germany has been totally revived and redeveloped to become yet again a rare jewel of the Baltic crown. Silver-sanded dunes spread from the sophisticated and picturesque resorts of Kühlungsborn, Heiligendamm and Warnemünde with their charm of bygone days combined with the comfort of today. A maritime climate of warm summers and mostly mild winters with water temperatures around 20°C in the sunniest part of Germany - around 2,000 hours of sunshine per year. Enjoy the healthgiving waters at the beautiful spa town of Bad Doberan. The inland lake district has more than 2000 lakes; one of them, the Mueritz, is the largest in Germany. The Hanseatic cities of Greifswald, Rostock, Wismar and Stralsund have a long history and tradition and all merit a visit. The Baltic Riviera of Mecklenburg offers a desirable new destination with an abundance of resorts to offer the discerning visitor.
